EXHIBITS OF LOCAL PRODUCTS

The Public Service Association inaugurates today the first of a series of home products exhibitions. Every week or fortnight the large front window of the Public Service rooms on King street will be re-arranged with an exhibit of some Hawaiian home industry.

Today the masons are at work building a window exhibit of a wall made of Hawaiian lava brick. This is one of the latest industries of Kaimuki, where the entire process may be seen in detail. Data concerning the uses of lava brick will be secured and kept on file at the Public Service rooms.

Arrangements are now being made with the Hawaiian tobacco people, those interested in the Hawaiian honey, jam, cotton, hard woods, and other native industries for window exhibits that later on will be displayed permanently in the Public Service rooms. Data concerning possible new industries in Hawaii will be collected and kept on file for the use of possible investors.

The lava brick industry is something new to the islands, and it took a malihini to see the possibilities of hitherto useless lava fields and to induce the kamaainas to invest their money in the lava brick plant that turns out the remarkable island product now to be seen in the window of the Public Service rooms.

THE VANISHING SAILING SHIP.

The fact is that the advantages are by no means all on the side of the steamship. Though the sailing ship takes a longer time on the voyage, the expenses are correspondingly small. The motive power costs nothing, and the absence of engine space and bunkers makes it possible for the sailing ship to utilize almost the whole of her capacity as cargo space. In the ordinary tramp steamer at the present day, one-third or more of the gross tonnage has to be deducted before the net tonnage is ascertained. Moreover, the crew required for a sailing vessel is in general, proportionately to the size, much smaller than on a steamer, because no engine staff is needed. On the other hand, of course, more men will be needed to trim the sails. But there is a further reason. The construction of sailing ships has not by any means remained where it was a century ago. Even then great advances had been made by American builders through the invention of the clipper-built vessels. The clipper was long and narrow and was the fastest sailing vessel afloat. Considerably later than 1812 the clipper could, under favorable conditions, beat the steamship in the voyage across the Atlantic. Another type of sailing ship was the schooner, the main peculiarity of which lies in the arrangement of the sails. There are no yards or spars, and the sails swing upon the mast and are supported by booms, as in a small sailing boat. There is also a topsail, but this, as well as the other sails, can be hoisted from the deck, enabling great economy of labor to be made. This type of ship has been much developed by multiplying the masts, and in 1902 a vessel, the Thomas W. Lawson, was constructed with seven masts, built of steel, carrying 7500 tons of cargo, and requiring a crew of only nineteen men. In regard to the use of iron and steel, sailing ships have had the same advantages as steamers, though sailing-ship builders were perhaps not so much alive to the possibilities of these materials as steamship builders. The most important single cause of the disappearance of the sailing ship is its irregularity, which fits it ill with the prevailing desire for co-ordination in the conduct of business. Consequently, the sailing vessel has been driven from one ocean highway after another. At the present time there are only a few routes which, in consequence of the small importance of speedy delivery or of the greater reliability of the trade winds, still enable the sailing ship to gain a precarious livelihood. The most important of these are the ones which lead around Cape Horn to Chile, to California and to Australia, and round the Cape of Good Hope to India and Australia.—London Economist.

FINE PROGRAM FOR ST. LOUIS

The first of the entertainments for the benefit of the Saint Louis baseball team will be given at the Park Theater on Monday evening next, commencing at 8 o'clock.

The program will be as follows: Motion picture. Kaala singers, fifteen strong. Fox and Claire, sharpshooters. Motion picture. Louise Bright, songstress. Motion picture. Coffman and Carroll, entertainers. Motion picture. The three O'Hagans.

The cause is a good one and the program of an attractive nature. The theater should be packed throughout the evening.

THE AMERICAN TEMPERAMENT.

It is a curious but inevitable irony that the American temperament, so notorious for its overwhelming confidence and self-esteem, should be of all temperaments least reflective, and for all its self-consciousness, should know itself so ill. When criticised, it is either perplexed or amused; when challenged, apologetically boastful, and seemingly delights in misconception and misrepresentation. A striking instance of this singular trait is the way Americans abroad exaggerate their native mannerisms and become veritable caricatures of themselves in good-natured mimicry of the national type. In its extreme form the tendency might be characterized as living up to a libel to save the trouble and expense of legal proceedings. Whether this be due to a sort of mistaken chivalry or to more childish responsibility is as hard to determine as it is unnecessary—either is reprehensible. There is in this dependence upon foreign opinion something of a native shrewdness for judging others by their opinion of oneself, but much more is to be attributed to an instinctive aversion from the pangs of introspection and a childish capacity for using other people as mirrors. No other nation, perhaps, has played so sensational a role, but no other nation has stood so in need of its audience. The histrionic demeanor of Americans abroad, at times so very like the behavior of actors off the stage, exacting calcium-light duty of the sun, is a real clue to the national temperament. If only by the reactions of others do we achieve any definite notion of what we ourselves are, it is small wonder that we have cultivated the actor's manner and practice his arts only it is a strange art for an otherwise inartistic nation, a curious dependence for a free people.—Alain Locke, North American Review.

CHAMBERLAIN'S COLIC CHOLERA AND DIARRHOEA REMEDY.

This is unquestionably the most successful preparation that has ever been produced for bowel complaints. Diarrhoea, dysentery, colic and pains in the stomach are quickly cured by it. It can always be depended upon even in the most severe and dangerous cases. In almost every neighborhood there is someone whose life has been saved by it. For sale by all dealers, Benson, Smith & Co., agents for Hawaii.

JORDAN'S SALE STARTS OFF WELL.

Jordan's special sale series began this morning, the start being made with Irish linens of every description. These goods were arranged in such manner as to be easily examined, and proved a revelation to the many ladies in search of exceptional values in this particular line. This section of the sale (Irish linens) will be continued until 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, when it will close, to be succeeded by a sale of other goods Monday morning, announcement concerning which will be made later.

This idea of a series of sales to run throughout September originated with Manager Curtis. In its elaborate aspect, it is something new here, but already bears evidence of becoming exceedingly popular with the ladies of Honolulu.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE First Circuit, Territory of Hawaii. At Chambers, In Probate. In the matter of the Estate of Charles Johnson and John Johnson, Minors. Order to show cause on Guardian's application to sell real estate.

On reading and filing the Petition of Frederick Bartwell Johnson, the Guardian of the above named Charles Johnson and John Johnson, minors, praying for an order of sale of certain real estate belonging to his said wards, viz: a one-half interest in a parcel of land on the makai side of Kunkini Street, in Honolulu, being lot No. 16 of the Kalaui Tract of S. E. Bishop, and setting forth certain legal reasons why such real estate should be sold, to-wit: That it would be for the benefit of the said minors if the said realty was sold and the proceeds invested in some productive stock or put on interest.

It is hereby ordered, That the heirs and next of kin of said wards and all persons interested in the said estate, appear before this Court on Monday, the 3rd day of October, A. D. 1911, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Court Room of this Court, in Honolulu, then and there to show cause why an order should not be granted for the sale of such estate.

Dated at Honolulu, August 30, A. D. 1911.

Attest: (Seal) By the Court: (Signed) V. M. HARRISON, Clerk of the Circuit Court of the First Circuit.
